The company said it provided leaflets and sales materials to landlords when they signed up which made clear their responsibilities. Offering so-called "rent-a-roof" schemes, A Shade Greener boomed in popularity during the 2010s when door-to-door solar panel sales were commonplace. It is run by Stewart Davies, the ex-chairman of Darlington FC.

What happened to a shade greener?

Issues for A Shade Greener are thought in part to have begun as Feed-In Tariff schemes became less generous. In 2012 the rate was cut from 43p per kilowatt hour to 21p. It dropped again to less than 5p in 2016, which was the same year the company stopped installing free solar panels. Then in 2019, the subsidy was dropped entirely.

Did a shade greener use 'aggressive' tactics to encourage homeowners?

A former employee from A Shade Greener said the firm used a direct marketing company that they claimed deployed "aggressive" tactics to encourage homeowners to sign up to the deals. It appears many homeowners didn't understand the full terms of the contract. The former employee said: "I thought that was quite problematic.
