Note: Lipo battery storage can refer to two things: what charge to store lipo batteries on, and how to physically store lipos. This post will talk about both of those topics, since they are related. Lipo batteries are temperamental little things(or huge things, if you've got 10,000 mah 6S packs). They're tricky to charge, tricky ...

They use lithium polymer batteries just like your planes do. LiPO cells are safe down to 3.0v; flying to land at 3.5v/cell is wasting a good 30-35% of your useable capacity. ... Been landing at 3.5-3.6v for about 5 years and charge to storage voltage after flying. i'm still using some of the same batteries from 5 years ago.

LiPO batteries stored in an Ammo Can will not explode. The answer is yes they can explode under pressure. Myth number 4. LiPO batteries at storage voltage will not catch fire. The answer to that is oh yes they can and do. Myth number 5 LiPO batteries only catch fire during charging or when physically damaged.

The majority of my lipo charging is done in my workshop located in the basement of my house and I will admit that I am not monitoring the charging most of the time. My lipo packs have also been stored in my workshop in some of the various lipo pouches and bags. I have also been charging the battery packs in one of the larger lipo bags.

For maximizing storage life, ideally, it is best to top-up the batteries at 40% of its standard (4.2V) charged state, around 3.7V. The 40% charge assures a stable condition even if self-discharge takes some of the battery's energy. Most battery manufacturers also store Li-ion batteries at 15°C (59°F) and at 40 % charge.
